Springtime: An explosion of Colours

Like cherry blossom time in Japan, jacaranda season in Mexico City is a must to experience. Walking is the best way to discover the jacaranda tree, famous for their spectacular blue/purple colours that paint streets and parks during the springtime.

Jacaranda is a sub-tropical tree native to South America (Bolivia, Brazil, Paraguay and Argentina). At the beginning of the 20th century, jacarandas were introduced to Mexico by Teodoro A. Dehesa, the Governor of the state of Veracruz, who decided to bring some seeds back home from his trip to Brazil.

They are fast growing trees that prefers sunny environment and low humidity. Also, they have a high resistance to air pollution, thus, Mexico City is an ideal place for growing this trees. They initially bloom in late spring and can have a second blooming period in fall. After each blooming, Jacaranda trees drop their flowers, carpeting roads, sidewalks and yards.

These beautiful trees are seen all over town, but here are some suggestions for enjoying the best of them in Mexico City: the surrounding areas of the Secretaría de Gobernación, Centro Nacional de las Artes, Centro Universitario de México, Museo Nacional de Antropología and Biblioteca Nacional de México (Ciudad Universitaria). The most dramatic display of jacarandas can be also found around Lomas de Chapultepec, Plaza de los Arcángeles (San Ángel), Parque España and Parque México (Condesa). Jacaranda trees create a breath-taking experience, enjoy the colours of Mexico City this spring! Click here to read more.
